I. INTRODUCTION

Defendants ValueClick, Inc. (“ValueClick”), Commission Junction, Inc. (“CJ”), and Be Free (collectively “Defendants”) may not disavow the very service they agreed to provide. Pointing to ambiguous disclaimers in an unidentified contract, Defendants argue that they cannot be held accountable for harm caused by their own failure to properly account for and process transactions on the marketing networks they operate.

Defendants’ arguments fail as a matter of law. It is axiomatic that a material breach of contract must give rise to a claim for damages by the harmed party. To construe an agreement otherwise is to invalidate the agreement altogether. Defendants, who enjoy significant profits from providing their affiliate marketing services, may not at once reap the benefit of the bargain and at the same time avoid all responsibility to their advertisers and publishers.

To make matters worse, Defendants profit directly from their wrongdoing at the expense of their advertisers and publishers. By improperly crediting transactions and paying commissions to entities that employ adware, Defendants violate the trust placed in them by their advertisers and publishers, violate their duty to protect the interests of their advertisers and publishers, and destroy the integrity of their advertiser and publisher affiliate marketing programs. For the reasons set forth below, Defendants’ motion to dismiss should be denied in its entirety.

II. SUMMARY OF FACTS

Affiliate marketing refers to online networks of advertisers and their independent affiliates. ¶ 9.¹ Advertisers, who are typically merchants offering goods or services to the public, engage affiliates (or “publishers”) to distribute their offers ¹ All “¶ ___” references are to the Class Action Complaint for: (1) Breach of Contract; (2) Negligence; (3) Unjust Enrichment; and (4) Unfair Business Practices (California Business & Professions Code 17200, et seq.) (“UCL”), filed on April 20, 2007 (“Complaint”).

1 to the public via the Internet. Id. Publishers place advertisers' offers (and links to 2 the advertisers' websites) on their own websites in order to drive consumers to 3 advertisers' websites. Id. Publishers are compensated by the advertisers, typically 4 by receiving a commission, whenever these consumers make a purchase on the 5 advertisers' websites. Id. At least 15-20% of all online sales occur as a result of 6 affiliate marketing publisher referrals. Id.

7 Defendants manage and operate affiliate marketing networks. ¶¶ 3-5, 10. As 8 part of their services offered to advertiser and publishers, Defendants promise to 9 track consumers' clicks and actions as those consumers move from publishers' 10 websites to advertisers' websites. ¶ 11. The end and aim of Defendants' service is 11 to calculate the commissions owed by advertisers to publishers, to provide a 12 complete accounting to advertisers and publishers, and to collect and distribute 13 commission payments from advertisers to publishers. Id.

14 Plaintiff Settlement Recovery Center, LLC ("Plaintiff") is an advertiser who 15 entered into an agreement with Defendants for affiliate marketing management 16 services. ¶ 69. Per the terms of that agreement, Defendants were required to 17 calculate, collect and distribute commissions owed by Plaintiff to publishers who 18 directed consumers to Plaintiff's website. ¶ 62. Based on Defendants' accounting of 19 transactions on its affiliate marketing networks, Plaintiff paid commissions (to be 20 distributed by Defendants to publishers responsible for driving traffic to Plaintiff's 21 website) and corresponding fees to Defendants. ¶¶ 62, 69, 72.

22 Unbeknownst to Plaintiff, Defendants' accounting included payables not 23 authorized by the agreement. Defendants' improper accounting caused Plaintiff to 24 pay commissions (and corresponding fees to Defendants) to parties other than 25 publishers who drove traffic to Plaintiff's website (¶¶ 16-20) and for transactions by 26 consumers who did not come to Plaintiff through Defendants' affiliate marketing 27
28

1 networks (§§ 21-25). See also §§ 71-72. In doing so, Defendants breached their 2 primary obligation to Plaintiff. §§ 63-65.

3 The sole beneficiaries of Defendants' breach were Defendants themselves, 4 who collected fees based on illegitimate transactions (§§ 48-55), and "adware" 5 entities. Adware, which is similar to "spyware," refers to malicious programs that 6 are nefariously installed on ordinary consumers' computer, often without their 7 knowledge. § 17. Adware operates by automatically inserting the adware entity's 8 identification code into transactions that the adware entity did not originate. §§ 16-9 18, 21-24. This identification code serves as the pretext for Defendants to credit the 10 adware entity with the transaction and collect corresponding fees for themselves. Id.

11 Defendants can readily detect transactions that are improperly credited to 12 adware entities, yet fail to do so because adware transactions bring additional 13 revenues to Defendants. §§ 48-60. By failing to weed out adware transactions and 14 adware entities, Defendants not only breached their primary obligation to charge 15 Plaintiff only for transactions originated by publishers, but they also breached their 16 promise to enforce their own rules, as set forth in the Code of Conduct, prohibiting 17 the use of adware on Defendants' affiliate marketing networks. §§ 39-47, 63-64.

18 III. ARGUMENT

19 A. Legal Standard

20 The Ninth Circuit disfavors granting Rule 12(b)(6) motions. See Gilligan v.
21 Jamco Dev. Corp., 108 F.3d 246, 249 (9th Cir. 1997) ("The motion to dismiss for 22 failure to state a claim is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted."). The Ninth 23 Circuit has stated that dismissal is proper only in "extraordinary" circumstances.
24 United States v. Redwood City, 640 F.2d 963, 966 (9th Cir. 1981).

25 In assessing the legal sufficiency of a complaint on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, 26 the Court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to plaintiff (Cahill 27 v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 80 F.3d 336, 338 (9th Cir. 1996)) and accept as true all 28

1 allegations in the complaint and the reasonable inferences drawn therefrom. Pareto 2 v. FDIC, 139 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1998). “The issue is not whether a plaintiff will 3 ultimately prevail but whether the claimant is entitled to offer evidence to support the 4 claims.” Gilligan, 108 F.3d at 249. If plaintiff has pleaded a “short and plain”
5 statement of its claims, the complaint should be upheld. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a).²

6 B. Plaintiff States a Claim for Breach of Contract

7 1. Defendants Breached Their Promise to Track “Clicks” And Collect 8 And Distribute Monies Owed to Legitimate Publishers

9 A complaint for breach of contract includes the following: (1) the existence of 10 a contract, (2) plaintiff’s performance or excuse for non-performance, 11 (3) defendant’s breach, and (4) damages to plaintiff therefrom. See Acoustics, Inc. v.
12 Trepte Constr. Co., 14 Cal. App. 3d 887, 913 [92 Cal. Rptr. 723] (1971).

13 The core facts here are not in dispute. Defendants admit they promised to 14 “track the ‘clicks’ and actions of end-users ... and collect and process payments from 15 advertisers to publishers based on the traffic that a publisher directs to a particular 16 advertiser.” MTD at 1.³ This is the fundamental service Defendants agreed to 17 provide to Plaintiff and the Advertiser Class.⁴ ¶¶ 11, 62, 86-91. Defendants failed to 18 materially perform this basic promise. ¶¶ 63-66, 88-90.

19 Plaintiff and the Advertiser Class performed their contractual duties by 20 making payments to Defendants based on Defendants’ accounting of affiliate 21 transactions. ¶¶ 11, 12, 48, 62, 63, 69, 86-91. Defendants, in turn, were obligated to 22 distribute those commissions to publishers “based on the traffic that a publisher

23 ² All citations, footnotes, and internal quotation marks omitted, and all emphasis 24 added, unless otherwise indicated.

25 ³ “MTD” refers to Defendants’ Notice of Motion and Motion to Dismiss Class 26 Action Complaint; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support.

27 ⁴ The proposed class in the present case consists of “all persons and/or entities that, 28 within the past four years, entered into an advertiser agreement with ValueClick and/or Commission Junction and/or Be Free for affiliate marketing management services on the CJ Affiliate Networks” (“Advertiser Class”). ¶ 83.

1 directs to a particular advertiser.” MTD at 1. Defendants breached this duty by 2 improperly paying entities (e.g., adware affiliates), instead of paying the true 3 publishers (who directed the traffic to Plaintiff and Advertiser Class). ¶¶ 18-25, 64.
4 In addition, Defendants also improperly charged Plaintiff and the Advertiser class for 5 transactions where Plaintiff and the class did not owe any money whatsoever. ¶¶ 21-6 23. By so breaching the agreement, Defendants harmed Plaintiff and the Advertiser 7 Class. ¶¶ 21-23, 71-72, 86-91.

8 2. Defendants Affirmatively Represented They Would Not Credit or 9 Pay Entities Who Did Not Qualify as Publishers

10 Defendants expressly represented in their Code of Conduct that entities who 11 illegitimately employ adware would not be credited as publishers.⁵ ¶¶ 39-47.
12 Defendants’ representations to Plaintiff and the Class included the following 13 language in the Code of Conduct:

- 14 • “As such, [Defendants] find it necessary...to clarify 15 and advocate what we enforce through our 16 respective affiliate network agreement terms and promote through guidelines and education.”
- 17 • “The fundamental philosophy behind the revised Code 18 of Conduct is that any publisher...must provide 19 recognizable value to the End-User and the Advertiser...It is [Defendants’] goal to eliminate the exploitation of advertisers and other publishers...”
- 20 • “The publishers of the Code of Conduct intend to 21 enforce compliance with these guidelines and work 22 to eliminate the inappropriate use of [adware].”

23 Friedman Decl., Ex. A at 1.

24 Defendants’ improper crediting of adware entities, contrary to the above 25 representations, caused Plaintiff and the Class to pay commissions to adware entities

26 ⁵ See Declaration of Jeff D. Friedman in Support of Plaintiff’s Opposition to 27 Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss Complaint (“Friedman Decl.”), Ex. A; Request for 28 Judicial Notice in Support of Opposition to Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss Complaint.

1 that did not provide “recognizable value to the End-User and the Advertiser.” 2 Notwithstanding, Defendants still paid themselves their fees which were associated 3 with these transactions. ¶¶ 12, 48, 62, 63. Thus, Defendants’ failure to perform the 4 terms contained in the Code of Conduct represents an additional breach of contract 5 by Defendants.

6 3. Defendants’ Interpretation of the Purported Disclaimers Is Wrong 7 and Does Not Justify Dismissal

8 Defendants’ sole argument to dismiss Plaintiff’s breach of contract claim is a 9 tortured interpretation of the language in paragraphs 1 and 8.4 of an unsigned 10 document attached to Defendants’ motion (hereafter, “Purported Disclaimers”).
11 Defendants assert that these paragraphs “expressly and unambiguously disclaim[] 12 any liability” for the complained of conduct. MTD at 9, 12. Defendants’ 13 interpretation of the Purported Disclaimers is wrong and clearly should be rejected at 14 the pleading stage.

15 Interpretation of purported contractual disclaimers are “to be strictly construed 16 against the seller.” Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co., 42 Cal. 2d 682, 694 [268 P.2d 17 1041] (1954). See also Masonite Corp. v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co., 65 Cal. App.
18 3d 1, 8-9 [135 Cal. Rptr. 170] (1976) (“ambiguities in [a] contract, especially in 19 exculpatory provisions, must be construed most strongly against the one who caused 20 the ambiguity to exist, i.e., the drafter”); Hauter v. Zogarts, 14 Cal. 3d 104, 119 [534 21 P.2d 377] (1975) (holding that any disclaimer or modification of warranties must be 22 strictly construed against seller). This maxim is particularly applicable to contractual 23 language “designed to whittle down the normal and ordinary rights of a customer.”
24 Basin Oil Co. of Cal. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co., 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 595 [271 P.2d 25 122] (1954).

26 As set forth below, there is a litany of grounds to reject Defendants’ 27 interpretation of the Purported Disclaimers. First, Defendants have improperly 28 submitted evidence that this Court cannot consider on a motion to dismiss. Second,

1 even if this Court were to consider Defendants' improperly submitted evidence, 2 Defendants fail to establish as a matter of law that the Purported Disclaimers should 3 be interpreted to bar Plaintiff's contract claim. Third, interpretation of the Purported 4 Disclaimers is a question of fact that this Court cannot decide on a motion to dismiss.
5 And fourth, Defendants have breached their express obligations in any agreement 6 with Plaintiff and class members and thus, have breached the covenant of good faith 7 and fair dealing that is a part of every contract.

8 a. Defendants May Not Rely on the Unsigned, Undated
9 Document Attached to Their Motion to Dismiss

10 Defendants improperly submit an unsigned, undated, and unauthenticated 11 document as an exhibit to their motion to dismiss. MTD, Ex. A. Defendants assert 12 that this unauthenticated document is the operative contract at issue in this case.
13 MTD at 4 (hereafter, "Unsigned Document"). The exact terms and conditions of 14 Plaintiff's agreement with Defendants are questions of fact that cannot be decided on 15 a motion to dismiss.⁶ See, e.g., Payday Advance Plus, Inc. v. Findwhat.com, Inc., 16 478 F. Supp. 2d 496, 500 n.3 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (declining to consider unsigned 17 contract on motion to dismiss "despite the fact that the language [plaintiff] quotes 18 in its complaint appears verbatim in the document [defendant] submitted"); 19 Marshall v. Standard Ins. Co., 214 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (C.D. Cal. 2000) (holding that 20 on a motion to dismiss, a court may properly consider documents whose contents are 21 alleged in the complaint only when their authenticity is not questioned). The Court 22 should summarily reject such improperly submitted evidence.

23
25

⁶ Also at issue is how, if at all, the operative terms and conditions have changed 26 throughout the class period. The Unsigned Document provides that "CJ shall have 27 the right to change, modify or amend ("Change") this Agreement, in whole or in 28 part, by posting a revised Agreement at least 14 days prior to the effective date of such Change." MTD, Ex. A at 10.6.

1 b. Defendants' Interpretation of the Purported Disclaimers Is 2 Inconsistent with the Intent of the Agreement

3 Plaintiff alleges, and Defendants do not dispute, that Defendants drafted the 4 agreements to which all publishers must agree. ¶¶ 61, 69. Under California law, any 5 uncertainties in the agreement must be resolved in favor of Plaintiff. See Cal. Civ.
6 Code § 1654 (“In cases of uncertainty ... the language of a contract should be 7 interpreted most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist”).

8 Defendants argue that the disclaimer of warranties in section 8.4 of the 9 Unsigned Document “clear[ly] and unambiguous[ly] bars Plaintiff’s claims. MTD at 10 10. To adopt Defendants’ interpretation of the purported disclaimers, however, 11 would allow Defendants to breach with impunity the central purpose and intent of 12 the agreement – to track critical information regarding sales and leads from links 13 placed by publishers and to cause advertisers to pay only legitimate publishers who 14 “provide recognizable value to the End-User and the Advertiser.” MTD, Ex. A at 15 § 3.2; Friedman Decl., Ex. A at 1.

16 First, disclaimers of express contractual obligations should rarely if ever be 17 given effect.⁷ See, e.g., Fundin v. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., 152 Cal. App. 3d 18 951, 958 [199 Cal. Rptr. 789] (1984) (“[A] disclaimer of an express warranty is 19 essentially contradictory”); Hauter, 14 Cal. 3d at 119 (holding disclaimer gives way 20 to express warranty unless clear agreement between the parties dictates contrary 21 intention); Fundin, 152 Cal. App. 3d at 958 (“[s]trict construction against the person 22 who has both warranted a particular fact to be true and then attempted to disclaim the 23 warranty”).

26 ⁷ Defendants’ express contractual obligations are enforceable express warranties.
27 See 4 Witkin, Summary 10th (2005) Sales, § 51, p. 62 (“A warranty is a contractual 28 term concerning some aspect of the sale, such as title to the goods, or their quality or quantity.”).

1 Second, the purported disclaimer itself recognized Defendants have duties 2 expressly stated elsewhere in the agreement. Defendants cite the following language 3 in support of their motion to dismiss the breach of contract claims:

4 EXCEPT AS EXPRESSLY STATED HEREIN, TO THE 5 FULLEST EXTENT PERMISSIBLE PURSUANT TO 6 APPLICABLE LAW, BOTH PARTIES DISCLAIM ALL 7 WARRANTIES EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, 8 BUT NOT LIMITED TO...(D) REGARDING 9 CORRECTNESS, ACCURACY, OR RELIABILITY...

10 MTD at 11, Ex. A at § 8.4. The phrase “except as expressly stated herein” clearly 11 modifies the disclaimer so as not to eliminate Defendants’ duty to track legitimate 12 publisher transactions. See, e.g., Lindberg v. Coutches, 167 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 828, 13 833 [334 P.2d 701] (1959) (holding that the phrase “unless otherwise specified” 14 modified the disclaimer so as not to eliminate warranty).

15 Third, no reasonable interpretation of the disclaimer of “correctness, accuracy, 16 or reliability” exists that does not contradict Defendants’ express contractual 17 obligations. Defendants try to claim that this language refers to CJ’s “tracking 18 software or transaction calculations.” MTD at 10. However, nowhere in section 8.4 19 do the terms “tracking software” or “transaction calculations” appear. MTD, Ex. A 20 at § 8.4. Defendants, who drafted this agreement, could have specifically included 21 this language if they so chose. And, again, Defendants’ interpretation runs counter 22 to their express obligation to track “critical information” that results “directly from 23 Links placed by” publishers. See Milton v. Hudson Sales Corp., 152 Cal. App. 2d 24 418, 432 [313 P.2d 936] (1957) (holding that disclaimer contradicted “provisions 25 necessarily recognizing some sort of an obligation”); Basin Oil, 125 Cal. App. 2d at 26 596 (“[a broad disclaimer] is to be read in the light of the subject matter of the 27 contract and the apparent intention of the parties”); Cal. Civ. Code § 1641 (“The 28

1 whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to give effect to every part, if 2 reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret the other.”).

3 Lastly, Defendants’ interpretation of this disclaimer language should be 4 rejected because it would mean the advertiser would assume the entire obligation to 5 ensure the correctness and accuracy of transactions. As alleged in the Complaint, 6 only Defendants have the ability to detect or prevent the use of adware on the CJ
7 Networks. ¶¶ 56-60. Interpreting this contractual term so that all such responsibility 8 falls on Plaintiff, who has no ability to protect itself in this regard, constitutes an 9 unreasonable allocation of risk. “If there is a type of risk allocation that should be 10 subjected to special scrutiny, it is probably the shifting to one party of a risk that only 11 the other party can avoid.” A&M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp., 135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 12 493 [186 Cal. Rptr. 114] (1982).

13 For these reasons, this Court should reject the disclaimer altogether. See Cal.
14 Civ. Code § 1653 (“Word in a contract which are wholly inconsistent with its nature, 15 or with the main intention of the party, are to be rejected.”); Cal. Civ. Code § 1638 16 (“The language of a contract is to govern its interpretation, if the language is clear 17 and explicit, and does not involve an absurdity.”).

18 c. Defendants’ Interpretation of the Purported Disclaimers
19 Would Render the Agreement Illusory

20 A contract with no remedy for breach of one party’s performance is illusory.
21 Unless both parties to a contract are bound so that either can sue the other for breach, 22 neither is bound. See 1 Williston on Contracts, § 1:1, at 2-3 (4th ed.1990) (“A 23 contract is a promise, or set of promises, for breach of which the law gives a remedy, 24 or the performance of which the law in some way recognizes as a duty”).
25 Defendants argue that the section 8.4 disclaimer bars Plaintiff from making any 26 claims regarding Defendants’ duty to track and process transactions. MTD at 10, 27 Ex. A at § 8.4. Plaintiff alleges, and Defendants do not deny, that tracking and 28 processing transactions form the foundation of the agreement. MTD at 1. If the 1 purported disclaimer prevents Defendants from being sued for breach of their core 2 obligations, then Defendants may perform or not perform at will, without 3 consequence, and the obligation is illusory.

4 Because the Purported Disclaimers leave Plaintiff without a remedy for breach 5 of Defendants' contractual obligations, they must fail as a matter of law as 6 unreasonable. See Cal. Civ. Code § 3542 ("Interpretation must be reasonable"); 7 Davanzia, S.L. v. Laserscope, Inc., No. C 07-0247 JF (HRL), U.S. Dist. Lexis 34849, 8 &7 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 27, 2007) ("The interpretation of a contract must be reasonable, 9 and...[p]reference must be given to reasonable interpretations as opposed to those 10 that are unreasonable, or that would make the contract illusory").⁸

11 d. The Purported Disclaimers Are Unconscionable

12 In addition to rendering the agreement illusory, Defendants' proffered 13 meaning of the Purported Disclaimers is unconscionable. Under California law, 14 "unconscionability has both a 'procedural' and a 'substantive' element." A&M 15 Produce, 135 Cal. App. 3d at 486. The two elements are evaluated on a "sliding 16 scale," thus, the more evidence of procedural unconscionability there is, the less 17 evidence of substantive unconscionability is needed to render the agreement 18 unenforceable, and vice versa. See Armendariz v. Found. Health Psychcare Servs.
19 Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 [99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745] (2000).

20 The Purported Disclaimers were presented to Plaintiff as a "take it or leave it" 21 offer without any opportunity for meaningful negotiation. ¶ 61, 69. The agreement 22 is thus a quintessential contract of adhesion and is procedurally unconscionable.⁹
23 See, e.g., Szetela v. Discover Bank, 97 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1100 [118 Cal. Rptr. 2d

24 _____
25 ⁸ Defendants' suggestion that Plaintiff has a remedy against third-party adware 26 affiliates is unsound because Plaintiff has no ability to independently identify adware transactions. ¶¶ 56-60.

27 ⁹ Whether Plaintiff could have entered into a contract with a competing network 28 "that does not include the offending terms is not the relevant test for procedural unconscionability." See, e.g., Ferguson, 298 F.3d 778, 784 (9th Cir. 2002).

1 862] (2002) (holding that take it or leave it clause, with no opportunity for 2 meaningful negotiation, is procedurally unconscionable). Accord Ferguson, 298
3 F.3d 778 at 783-84.¹⁰

4 Further, as alleged in the Complaint, only Defendants can detect and prevent 5 the use of adware on their networks. ¶¶ 56-60. Yet, the Purported Disclaimers 6 unreasonably and without any justification place the entire burden of detecting and 7 preventing adware on Plaintiff. MTD, Ex. A at § 8.4. Additionally, the Purported 8 Disclaimers are so broad that they prevent Plaintiff from suing Defendants, ex ante, 9 for any breach. Id. Defendants are under no such contractual restrictions and may 10 sue Plaintiff freely. Id. Because the Purported Disclaimers unreasonably shift risk to 11 Plaintiff and result in one-sided availability of remedies for breach, they are 12 substantively unconscionable. See, e.g., A&M Produce, 135 Cal. App. 3d at 487 (“a 13 contractual term is substantively suspect if it reallocates the risks of the bargain in a 14 objectively unreasonable or unexpected manner”).

15 Because the Purported Disclaimers are both procedurally and substantively 16 unconscionable, the Court should refuse to enforce those clauses. See Cal. Civ. Code 17 § 1670.5 (courts may refuse to enforce unconscionable clause in contract). See also 18 A&M Produce, 135 Cal. App. 3d at 484 (“Unconscionability is a flexible doctrine 19 designed to allow courts to directly consider numerous factors which may adulterate 20 the contractual process.”).¹¹

22 ¹⁰ In addition, as argued below in section III(B)(3)(f), the Purported Disclaimers 23 were neither conspicuous nor explicit. As such, they failed to give Plaintiff actual 24 notice of the rights it was relinquishing and support a finding of procedural 25 unconscionability. See, e.g., Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams, 279 F.3d 889, 893 (9th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1112 (2002) (“When assessing procedural unconscionability, [a court will] consider...the extent to which the contract clearly discloses its terms”).

26 ¹¹ If the Court finds that the evidence before it is insufficient at this stage, then it 27 should deny Defendants’ motion to dismiss and allow discovery to proceed. See Cal.
28 Civ. Code § 1670.5(b) (“When it is claimed...that the contract or any clause thereof may be unconscionable the parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to 1 e. Defendants’ Interpretation of the Term “Publisher” to Refer 2 to Adware Entities Is Patently Unreasonable

3 Defendants also attempt to avoid their contractual obligations by claiming that 4 they are free to make improper payments to entities that are not owed commissions 5 because “CJ is, under no circumstances, responsible for the practices of any 6 Publisher or Advertiser. . . .” MTD at 10. Defendants’ argument misses the point, 7 however. Whether Defendants are immune from liability resulting from the acts of 8 publishers is not the issue here, where Plaintiff seeks damages from Defendants for 9 Defendants’ own acts and omissions from the breach of the agreement.

10 Defendants appear to be advancing the remarkable claim that adware entities 11 engaged in theft on Defendants’ network somehow qualify as bona fide publishers.
12 This contract interpretation not only strains credulity but it does violence to the letter 13 and spirit of the agreement.

14 In the Introduction section of the Unsigned Document, Defendants define a 15 “Publisher” to be “a person, entity, affiliate, publisher or its agent, operating one or 16 more ‘Web site(s)’ . . . [who] may earn financial compensation . . . for ‘Transactions’ 17 (sales and/or ‘Leads’) made from such Publisher’s Web site. . . .” MTD, Ex. A at 1.
18 The Publisher Agreement defines “Publisher” as “a person, entity, affiliate or its 19 agent, operating ‘Web site(s)’ . . . and/or other promotional methods to drive traffic
20 to another’s Web site or Web site content” Carrier MTD, Ex. A at 1.¹²

21 Adware entities do not engage in efforts to originate traffic. ¶¶ 16-20. These 22 entities merely act as parasites to get credit for traffic developed by legitimate

23 24 present evidence as to its commercial setting, purpose, and effect to aid the court in 25 making the determination”).

26 ¹² “Carrier MTD” refers to the Notice of Motion and Motion to Dismiss Class Action 27 Complaint; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support, filed on June 13, 28 2007 in Carrier v. ValueClick, Inc., et al., Case No. CV-07-02641 FMC (CTx). The “Publisher Agreement” refers to Exhibit A to the Carrier MTD that, while Plaintiff Carrier does not agree is the operative agreement, does contain the above language.

1 publishers and advertisers. Id. Thus, according to the literal language Defendants 2 drafted, adware entities do not meet the plain definition of a “Publisher.”¹³

3 Moreover, the contractual definition of “Publisher” comports with the parties’ 4 intent that Defendants should collect and distribute commissions only to the parties 5 who actually direct traffic to Plaintiff’s website. That the parties would intend that 6 Defendants have no responsibility regarding who they pay commissions to – or if 7 they are owed at all – is not in accord with common sense of the facts or business 8 life. No reasonable advertiser would enter into an agreement that allowed 9 Defendants to pay commissions to adware entities in lieu of the advertiser’s 10 legitimate affiliates – such an arrangement would entirely threaten the viability of the 11 advertiser’s affiliate marketing program. ¶¶ 15, 20. See, e.g., Milton, 152 Cal. App.
12 2d at 432 (rejecting defendant’s interpretation of disclaimer because, in part, 13 interpretation defied common sense). Thus, the language purporting to relieve 14 Defendants of any responsibility “for the practices of any Publisher” is inapposite to 15 Plaintiff’s claims for breach of contract.

16 f. The Purported Disclaimers Do Not Reference or Appear in 17 the Section of the Unsigned Document Concerning Adware

18 If the language “CJ is, under no circumstances, responsible for the practices of 19 any Publisher” were intended to relieve Defendants of all liability related to adware, 20 then the clause is not only ambiguously drafted, but illogically placed in the 21 Unsigned Document. That clause appears in section 1 of the Unsigned Document.
22 Section 1 is titled “Relationship” and pertains to criminal and/or regulatory 23 violations. MTD, Ex. A at § 1. Nothing in section 1 deals with adware practices.

24
25 ¹³ Similarly, the Unsigned Document, at section 3.2, requires that Defendants will 26 provide “tracking of critical information regarding sales and Leads that result 27 directly from Links placed by [Plaintiff’s] Publishers through the Network Service.”
28 MTD, Ex. A at § 3.2. Adware entities do not place links through the Network Service, but instead operate through software installed directly on the end-user’s computer. ¶¶ 16-20. Plainly, adware entities cannot be considered Publishers.

1 By contrast, section 2.2 of the Unsigned Document is titled “Publisher Use of 2 Links” and refers extensively to adware practices which Plaintiff complains of.
3 MTD, Ex. A at § 2.2. Section 2.2 prohibits the use of “any device, program, robot, 4 Iframes, hidden frames, JavaScript popup windows, redirects” or forced clicks. Id.
5 These practices are among those alleged to constitute adware fraud. ¶ 38. Section 6 2.2 does not contain any language that could be interpreted as a disclaimer.

7 The placement of the purported disclaimer that “CJ is, under no circumstances, 8 responses for the practices of any Publisher or Advertiser” indicates that it was 9 meant to relieve Defendants of responsibility for the behavior listed in section 1. If it 10 were meant to apply to adware practices, it would have appeared in section 2.2, or in 11 section 8.4, which section is titled “Disclaimer of Warranties.” See, e.g., Milton, 152 12 Cal. App. 2d at 432 (rejecting defendant’s interpretation of disclaimer because, in 13 part, disclaimer appeared in illogical portion of the contract).¹⁴

14 4. Alternatively, Interpretation of the Disclaimer Language Is a 15 Question of Fact Not Properly Decided on a Motion to Dismiss

16 Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s breach of contract claims rests 17 entirely on Defendants’ interpretation of the Unsigned Document. Plaintiff disputes 18 Defendants’ assertion that the Unsigned Document is the operative agreement in this 19 case. Even if it were, however, nowhere in the Unsigned Document is there any 20 clear, unequivocal and reasonable disclaimer of Defendant’s duties to collect and 21 distribute commissions based on legitimate publisher activity and to enforce its rules 22 against the use of adware. The Unsigned Document is, at best, ambiguous. On a 23 motion to dismiss, “where an ambiguous contract is the basis of an action, . . . [s]o 24 long as the pleading does not place a clearly erroneous construction upon the 25 provisions of the contract, . . . [the court] must accept as correct plaintiff’s allegations

26 ¹⁴ In addition to appearing in an illogical section of the Unsigned Document, the 27 purported section 1 disclaimer is not in bold or capitalized typeface, nor does it stand 28 out in any way. Disclaimers, in order to be effective, must be conspicuously placed in the contract so as to give actual notice to the parties. See Cal. Com. Code § 2316.

1 as to the meaning of the agreement.” Aragon-Haas v. Family Sec. Ins. Servs., 231
2 Cal. App. 3d 232, 237-38 [282 Cal. Rptr. 233] (1991). See also Shaw v. MGM, Inc., 3 37 Cal. App. 3d 587, 599 [113 Cal. Rptr. 617] (1974) (“Obviously, we do not hold 4 that plaintiff’s interpretation of the contract is valid. We merely hold that it was error 5 to resolve the issue against him solely on his own pleading.”).

6 If, however, the Court determines that the record is not yet sufficiently 7 developed to identify which contract provisions apply here and to determine the 8 meaning of any such contract provisions, Defendants’ motion to dismiss should be 9 denied in favor of discovery to aid in the Court’s interpretation of the agreement.

10 5. Defendants Have Breached the Covenant of Good Faith and Fair 11 Dealing 12 “Inherent in every contract is a covenant of good faith and fair dealing which 13 implies a promise that each party will refrain from doing anything to injure the right 14 of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement.” Aragon-Haas, 231 Cal. App.

15 3d at 238. See also Carma Developers (Cal.) v. Marathon Dev. Cal. Inc., 2 Cal. 4th 16 342, 371 [6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467] (1992) (“Every contract imposes upon each party a 17 duty of good faith and fair dealing in its performance and its enforcement”).

18 Defendants promised to process payments from advertisers to publishers based 19 on the traffic that a publisher directs to a particular advertiser (§§ 11, 62, 86-91) and 20 to enforce compliance with the Code of Conduct guidelines to eliminate the 21 inappropriate use of adware (§§ 39-47). These promises, which Defendants 22 breached, were intended to protect Plaintiff from paying any illegitimate fees and 23 commissions. Id. By injuring Plaintiff’s right to receive the benefits of the 24 agreement, Defendants breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied 25 in every contract.

26 C. Plaintiff States a Claim for Negligence

27 Defendants argue that Plaintiff may not bring its claim for negligence for want 28 of “conduct...[that] also violates a duty independent of the contract arising from 1 principles of tort law.” MTD at 15-16. By law, however, Defendants owed Plaintiff

2 an independent duty of care with Plaintiff’s money. Having accepted Plaintiff’s 3 money in order to distribute it to Plaintiff’s legitimate publishers, and having 4 collected a fee for doing so, Defendants undertook the duty of care that a bailor owes 5 a bailee. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1814 (“A voluntary deposit is made by one giving to 6 another . . . for the benefit of the former, or of a third party.”).

7 “A bailment is generally defined as the delivery of a thing to another for 8 special object or purpose, on a contract, express or implied, to conform to the objects 9 or purposes of the delivery which may be as various as the transactions of men... in 10 sum, a bailment is a contractual relationship.” Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers, 8 Cal.
11 App. 3d 844, 850 [88 Cal. Rptr. 39] (1970). See also Gebert v. Yank, 172 Cal. App.
12 3d 544, 551 [218 Cal. Rptr. 585] (1985) (same); 13 Witkin, Summary 10th (2005) 13 Pers. Prop., § 156, p. 168 (“A bailment (called deposit in the Civil Code) is the 14 deposit of personal property with another, usually for a particular purpose, under an 15 express or implied contract. The purpose may be to use or repair, keep, transport, 16 sell, or exchange it, etc.”).

17 The duty of care a bailee owes to a bailor is imposed by law and independent 18 of any contractual duties owed. “[A] bailment for the benefit of both parties, . . . is a 19 bailment for hire, and imposes on the bailee the duty to use ordinary care with 20 respect to the bailed property.” Gebert, 172 Cal. App. 3d at 551. “The rule which 21 imposes this duty is of universal application as to all persons who by contract 22 undertake professional or other business engagements requiring the exercise of care, 23 skill and knowledge; the obligation is implied by law and need not be stated in the 24 agreement. . .” Allan v. Bekins Archival Serv., Inc., 91 Cal. App. 3d 835 [154 Cal.
25 Rptr. 458, 463] (1979). See also Cal. Civ. Code § 1852 (“A depositary for hire must 26 use at least ordinary care for the preservation of the thing deposited.”); 13 Witkin, 27 Summary 10th (2005) Pers. Prop., § 161, p. 172-73 (“The bailee must use ordinary 28

1 care, i.e., such care as an ordinarily prudent person exercises with respect to his or 2 her own property of a similar description.”).

3 Here, Defendants, as bailees in possession of Plaintiff’s monies, were required
4 to exercise ordinary care in fulfilling their express obligations to distribute Plaintiff’s 5 monies to those publishers who actually directed traffic to Plaintiff’s website. By 6 failing to do so (intentionally or otherwise), Defendants breached their agreement 7 with Plaintiff. ¶¶ 93-98. Under California law, Defendants are liable for their failure 8 to exercise ordinary care in accordance with their agreement with Plaintiff “through 9 negligence or otherwise.” Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc., 246 Cal.
10 App. 2d 529, 533 [54 Cal. Rptr. 770] (1966).

11 That Defendants’ conduct also amounts to a breach of contract does not 12 foreclose Defendants’ separate and independent liability for negligence. “A contract 13 to perform services gives rise to a duty of care which requires that such services be 14 performed in a competent and reasonable manner. A negligent failure to do so may 15 be both a breach of contract and a tort.” North Am. Chem. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 16 Cal. App. 4th 764, 774 [69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] (1997). See also Allan, 154 Cal. Rptr.
17 at 463 (“Under California law, negligent failure to observe a legal duty to use 18 reasonable care is both a tort and a breach of contract”).

19 D. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiff May Plead Unjust
20 Enrichment in the Alternative

21 It is axiomatic that “[a] party may also state as many separate claims or 22 defenses as the party has regardless of consistency.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2). The 23 Ninth Circuit has affirmed the liberal pleading rules that permit inconsistent 24 pleadings of causes of action in contract and equity, pursuant to Rule 8(e)(2). See, 25 e.g., Molsbergen v. United States, 757 F.2d 1016, 1018-19 (9th Cir. 1985) (holding 26 lower court in error for construing inconsistent allegations as to bar claim).

27 It is entirely appropriate to have pleadings in equity and in contract, one for 28 breach of contract and the other for unjust enrichment. Not only do the Federal

1 Rules expressly permit pleading inconsistent claims, but the facts of this case warrant 2 it. Whether any contracts cover the subject matter in controversy here has not been 3 determined at this stage of the litigation. If this Court ultimately finds that the 4 subject matter was governed by contract, then it may dismiss Plaintiff's unjust 5 enrichment claim. But if this Court should find otherwise, then Plaintiff should be 6 allowed to proceed on its unjust enrichment claim. "Either way, it is not appropriate 7 to dismiss the unjust enrichment claim [on a motion to dismiss]." MDCM Holdings, 8 Inc. v. Credit Suisse First Boston Corp., 216 F. Supp. 2d 251, 261 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).
9 See also Adelman v. Christy, 90 F. Supp. 2d 1034, 1045 (D. Ariz. 2000) ("A theory 10 of unjust enrichment is unavailable only . . . if that plaintiff has already received the 11 benefit of her contractual bargain.").

12 In support of their motion to dismiss, Defendants rely upon Paracor Finance, 13 Inc. v. Gen. Elect. Capital Corp., 96 F. 3d 1151 (9th Cir. 1996) and Gerlinger v.
14 Amazon.com, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d 838 (N.D. Cal. 2004). Neither of these cases 15 involved motions to dismiss at the pleading stage, and neither involved Rule 8(e), 16 which permits inconsistent pleadings.¹⁵ The situation at bar is manifestly different, 17 since there has been no fact finding and Plaintiff is expressly permitted to plead 18 inconsistent causes of action under Rule 8(e). Defendants' motion to dismiss 19 Plaintiff's unjust enrichment claim should be denied.

20 E. Plaintiff States a Claim Under Section 17200

21 The UCL's scope is broad and includes "any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent 22 business act or practice. . . . [Its] coverage is sweeping, embracing anything that can 23 properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law."
24

25 ¹⁵ Paracor was decided on appeal from an order granting summary judgment. 302 F.
26 2d at 1157. The court had determined that the facts showed valid and enforceable 27 contracts that governed the parties' rights, thereby precluding recovery on the theory 28 of unjust enrichment. Id. at 1167. Similarly, Gerlinger was decided on summary judgment (311 F. Supp. 2d at 840), and the court determined that "a valid express contract covering the same subject matter exist[ed] between the parties. Id. at 856.

1 Rubin v. Green, 4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1200 [17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828] (1993). Defendants 2 mistakenly assert that Plaintiff's UCL allegations are "entirely duplicative of 3 Plaintiff's breach of contract claim" and thus must be dismissed.¹⁶ MTD at 17.
4 Under California law, "a breach of contract may in fact form the predicate for 5 Section 17200 claims, provided it also constitutes conduct that is 'unlawful, or 6 unfair, or fraudulent.'" Watson Labs., Inc. v. Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, Inc., 178 F.
7 Supp. 2d 1099, 1118 n.12 (C.D. Cal. 2001).

8 Regardless of which prong is at issue, "whether a business act or practice 9 constitutes unfair competition within Section 17200 is a question of fact." Watson 10 Labs., 178 F. Supp. 2d at 1117. See also People v. McKale, 25 Cal. 3d 626, 635 [159 11 Cal. Rptr. 811] (1979) ("What constitutes unfair competition ... under any given set 12 of circumstances is a question of fact"); McKell v. Washington Mut., Inc., 142 Cal.
13 App. 4th 1457, 1472 [49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227] (2006) ("the determination is [a] 14 question of fact, requiring consideration and weighing of evidence from both sides 15 before it can be resolved").

16 1. Plaintiff Pleads Unlawful Practices

17 Defendants argue that "Plaintiff has identified no law other than the alleged 18 breach of contract...and thus does not state a claim that the practice is unlawful." 19 MTD at 17-18. However, "[s]ince an 'unlawful' business practice actionable under 20 the UCL is one that violates an existing law, including case law, the alleged 21 misconduct can be addressed under the UCL." Comty. Assisting Recovery, Inc. v.
22 Aegis Sec. Ins. Co., 92 Cal. App. 4th 886, 891 [112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304] (2001). Thus, 23 if Plaintiff's allegations support its claims for breach of contract, unjust enrichment,

24 ¹⁶ Defendants assert that Plaintiff's Section 17200 allegations are limited to one 25 paragraph of the complaint. Defendants ignore well-established law that "[i]f 26 substantial facts which constitute a cause of action are averred in the complaint or 27 can be inferred by reasonable intendment from the matters which are pleaded, 28 although the allegations of these facts are intermingled with conclusions of law, the complaint is not subject to demurrer for insufficiency." Krug v. Meeham, 109 Cal.
App. 2d 274, 277 [240 P.2d 732] (1952).

1 or negligence, then those allegations necessarily state a claim that Defendants' 2 practices were unlawful.

3 2. Plaintiff Has Adequately Alleged Unfair Acts

4 Defendants are simply incorrect when they apply Cel-Tech to argue that 5 Plaintiff fails to state a claim for unfairness because there is “no alleged threat of a 6 violation of an antitrust law, or ... the policy of spirit of one of those law, or any 7 other activity that significantly threatens or harms competition.” MTD at 18.
8 Defendants’ argument must be rejected because the test in Cel-Tech concerned only 9 claims of unfairness to competitors and was expressly “limited to that context.” Cel-
10 Tech Commc’ns., Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co., 20 Cal.4th 163, 187 n.12 [83 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548] (1999). See also Knevelbaard Dairies v. Kraft Foods, Inc., 232 F.
12 3d 979, 994 (9th Cir. 2000); Pegasus Satellite Television, Inc. v. DirecTV, Inc., 318 13 F. Supp. 2d 968, 978 (C.D. Cal. 2004). Plaintiff is alleged to be a consumer of 14 Defendants’ services, not a competitor. ¶ 2. Therefore the unfairness test in Cel- 15 Tech does not apply.

16 Prior courts have found competition to be “unfair” if it is “immoral, unethical, 17 oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers.” Gregory v.
18 Albertson's, Inc., 104 Cal. App. 4th 845, 854 [128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389] (2002). “One 19 test for determining an unfair practice is whether the gravity of the harm to the 20 victim outweighs the utility of the defendant’s conduct.” People ex rel. Renne v.
21 Servantes, 86 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1095 [103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 (2001)].

22 Here, by causing Plaintiff to pay adware entities in lieu of publishers, and by 23 causing Plaintiff to pay commissions where none were owing at all, Defendants have 24 caused Plaintiff and the Advertiser Class to “suffer serious, and in many cases, 25 irreversible losses.” ¶¶ 20-25. By its conduct, Defendants failed to deliver “new, 26 unique customers and/or leads” (¶ 9) and failed to “collect and process payments 27 from advertisers to publishers based on the traffic that a publisher directs to a 28

1 particular advertiser.” MTD at 1. The only benefit resulting from Defendants’ 2 practice is that Defendants’ own revenues were increased. ¶¶ 48-55.

3 3. Plaintiff Pleads Fraudulent and Deceptive Statements

4 Defendants advance the remarkable claim that “Plaintiff does not identify any 5 supposedly actionable misrepresentation or omission at all by Commission 6 Junction.” MTD at 18-19. To the contrary, Plaintiff alleges, inter alia, that: in 7 response to allegations that an entity was stealing commissions, Defendants issued a 8 report stating that the entity was in compliance with all rules (¶ 34); Defendants 9 issued false and misleading statements to all of its advertisers in the form of the Code 10 of Conduct, which Defendants do not enforce (¶¶ 39-47); and Defendants failed to 11 disclose to Plaintiff their true policy regarding adware and the prevalence of adware 12 activities on its networks (¶ 70).

13 Defendants also argue that Plaintiff has failed to allege actual reliance on 14 allegedly false statements. MTD at 17-18. However, as Defendants point out, the 15 issue is currently being decided by the California Supreme Court. MTD at 18 n.6.
16 “It is therefore unsettled, as a matter of California law, whether actual reliance is 17 required to plead a cause of action under UCL ... As the state’s highest court is in 18 the process of deciding this question, it would be imprudent for the court to reach the 19 issue at this time.” Faigman v. Cingular Wireless, LLC, No. C-06-04622 (MHP), 20 2007 U.S. Dist. Lexis 14908, at *17 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 2, 2007).¹⁷

21 F. Defendants Are on Notice of Plaintiff’s Alter Ego Claims

22 Defendants argue that Plaintiff’s “generalized, unsupported [alter ego] 23 allegations” are insufficient to state a claim against ValueClick and Be Free. MTD 24

25 ¹⁷ Defendants cite Cattie v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. to argue that a plaintiff must plead 26 actual reliance. MTD at 18. The Cattie court, however, failed altogether to take 27 notice that the Supreme Court has granted certiorari on that exact issue. To the 28 extent that the federal court in Cattie purported to determine an issue of substantive California state law currently under review by the Supreme Court, its holding is not binding on this Court.

1 at 21-22. Defendants, however, ignore Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), 2 “which provides that a complaint must include only a short and plain statement of 3 the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Swierkiewicz v. Sorema 4 N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 512 [122 S. Ct. 992; 152 L. Ed. 2d 1] (2002). Under Rule 8(a), 5 “[s]uch a statement must simply give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff’s 6 claim is . . . [and a] court may dismiss a complaint only if it is clear that no relief 7 could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the 8 allegations.” Id. at 513.

9 In order to sufficiently put Defendants on notice, Plaintiff must show that 10 there is such a “unity of interest and ownership” between the two corporations that 11 their separate personalities no longer exist, and that an “inequitable result” would 12 follow if the parent were not held liable. Mesler v. Bragg Mgmt. Co., 39 Cal. 3d 13 290, 300 [702 P.2d 601] (1985).

14 Plaintiff goes beyond merely conclusory allegations and pleads facts that 15 clearly put Defendants on notice of its alter ego claims: that ValueClick manages 16 CJ’s networks devoted to its affiliate marketing business (§ 74); that Be Free and 17 Commission Junction share the same website (§ 75); that ValueClick engages in 18 direct sales and management of Commission Junction’s and Be Free’s affiliate 19 marketing services (§ 76); that ValueClick is the sole shareholder of Commission 20 Junction and Be Free (§§ 4-5); that ValueClick, Commission Junction and Be Free 21 all provide essentially identical affiliate marketing services(§§ 3-5); and that 22 ValueClick’s, Commission Junction’s and Be Free’s affiliate networks are 23 indistinguishable (§ 7).

24 Plaintiff’s allegations clearly meet the standards set by California courts for 25 alter ego claims. See, e.g., Maganallez v. Hilltop Lending Corp., No. C 06-07340 SI, 26 2007 WL 1223856, at *11 (C.D. Cal. April 25, 2007) (alleging that alter ego was 27 “inadequately capitalized, failed to maintain corporate formalities and was designed 28

1 to limit the liability of [parent]”); In re Napster, Inc. Copyright Litig. v. Hummer
2 Winblad Venture Partners, 354 F. Supp. 2d 1113, 1122 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (alleging 3 major shareholder had “essentially full operational control”); Fed. Reserve Bank of 4 San Francisco v. HK Sys., No. 95 CV 4700 (SJ), 1997 WL 227955, at *5 (N.D. Cal.
5 May 1, 1997) (alleging parent “dominated and controlled” the subsidiary “to such an 6 extent that the individuality and separateness of the subsidiary had ceased”; that the 7 parent “disregarded the corporate form of the subsidiary”; and that subsidiary was so 8 inadequately capitalized that its capitalization was “illusory”).

9 Defendants’ cases are inapposite. In In re Currency Conversion Fee Antitrust 10 Litig., 265 F. Supp. 2d 385 (S.D.N.Y. 2003), the court rejected the plaintiff’s alter 11 ego claim, which was supported only by an allegation that the subsidiary was 12 wholly-owned by the parent and that the parent “exercised such dominion and 13 control over its subsidiaries.” Id. at 426. Defendants also cite Wady v. Provident 14 Life & Accident Ins. Co. of Am., 216 F. Supp. 2d 1060 (C.D. Cal. 2002). In Wady, 15 which was decided on summary judgment, the court found that the complaint 16 contained “no allegations” whatsoever purporting to establish the defendants as alter 17 egos. Id. at 1067.¹⁸

18 The Complaint sufficiently puts Defendants on notice of Plaintiff’s alter ego 19 claims. Many of the facts to support Plaintiff’s alter ego claims are solely in 20 Defendants’ possession. As one court held under similar circumstances, “[b]ecause 21 the issue of alter ego liability is a fact intensive inquiry and because plaintiff has 22 satisfied the notice pleading requirement, dismissal of plaintiff’s alter ego theory 23 would be inappropriate here.” Monaco v. Liberty Life Assurance Co., No. C06-24 07021 MJJ, 2007 U.S. Dist. Lexis 31298, at *19 (N.D. Cal. April 17, 2007). See 25 also Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co., 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 836-837 26

27 ¹⁸ Although Defendants also cite Am. West Airlines, Inc. v. GPA Group, Ltd., 877 F.
28 2d 793 (9th Cir. 1989) and Meisel v. Allstate Indem. Co., 357 F. Supp. 2d 1222 (E.D.
Cal. 2005), in neither case did plaintiff invoke or plead alter ego.

1 [26 Cal. Rptr. 806] (1962) (“Whether alter ego [applies is a question of fact] which 2 necessarily varies according to the circumstances of each case.”).¹⁹

3 IV. CONCLUSION

4 For all of the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff respectfully requests that 5 Defendants’ motion to dismiss be overruled in its entirety. In the unlikely event this 6 Court finds Plaintiff fails to state a claim, leave to amend should be “freely given.”
7 Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a); Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 911 F.2d 367, 373 (9th Cir.
8 1990).

24 ¹⁹ If the Court finds Plaintiff’s alter ego allegations insufficient, Plaintiff respectfully 25 requests leave to amend those allegations. Plaintiff will add allegations, among 26 others, that ValueClick recently named CJ General Manager Tom Vadnais as its 27 Chief Executive Officer. Plaintiff will also allege that on the May 30, 2007, Vadnais 28 stated that as ValueClick’s CEO, he would “continue to directly manage the businesses [he had] been involved with most recently, which [were] the affiliate marketing and Mediaplex businesses.” Plaintiff will also add allegations that all Defendants share the same law firm, computer resources, and that ValueClick entirely or partially drafted Commission Junction’s service agreements.
